Commanders Comments

Welcome to the February UTA.

I need to do some rumor control in this month's commentary. The National Commission on the Structure of the Air Force released its report last week. There will likely be a lot of hand wringing and gnashing of teeth over some of their recommendations. The two recommendations that will likely receive the most attention within the 477th are the recommendation to disestablish AFRC and fold those people into the RegAF MAJCOMs, and the recommendation to move associations to an i-wing structure that would have a single integrated chain of command within a single unit comprised of active and reserve members. Those recommendations are just that...recommendations.

Once again, I find myself in the unenviable position of encouraging all of you to remain calm and to stay focused on the mission at hand. The Air Force structure and our senior military and civilian leaders have a lot of work to do before any of these recommendations come to fruition. There will be a long process of implementation for any of the recommendations to be implemented, if any of them are ultimately adopted. Our job is to continue to focus on our team, our mission and our efforts to continue the growth and maturation of the 477th Fighter Group. You are all doing amazing work. Please continue to do so, and remember that we do not know what the future holds in regards to the NCASAF report.

I thank you for your service and sacrifice. Stay focused and sharp as we operate this weekend, and have a great UTA.

Respectfully
Col Otten

Original Tuskegee Airman visits Alaska F-22 Reserve Unit, JBER

By Capt. Ashley Conner

477th Fighter Group Public Affairs

JOINT BASE ELMENDORF-RICHARDSON, Alaska --An original Tuskegee Airman had the chance to visit with the Airmen of the 477th Fighter Group that are continuing the Tuskegee legacy of excellence here Jan. 31.

After a tour of the 477th Fighter Group headquarters where Tuskegee Airmen photos and memorabilia adorn the walls, retired Lt. Col. Leo R. Gray, a P-51 pilot assigned to the 100th Pursuit Squadron during World War II spoke to Reservists.

“The Tuskegee Airmen experiment is a classic example of overcoming adversity,” said Gray. “They said we couldn’t do it. But we did.”

Gray joined the Army Air Corps and began his aviation cadet training in 1943. Little more than a year later he graduated from the Tuskegee Army Airfield as a 2nd Lieutenant, single engine pilot.

He arrived in Italy in March 1945 and flew 15 combat missions before the war ended while assigned to the 100th Pursuit Squadron. He eventually amassed a total of 750 flight hours. He left active duty in 1946, but remained in the Air Force Reserve until 1984.

Gray’s 100th Pursuit Squadron along with the 301st, 302nd and 99th Pursuit Squadrons all fell under the 332nd Fighter Group, better known as the Red Tails. Today the 302nd Fighter Squadron is Alaska’s only Reserve F-22 unit and falls under the 477th Fighter Group, which also traces its lineage back to the another Tuskegee unit, the 477th Bombardment Group.

While the Red Tails were known for their achievements, ultimately flying more than 15,000 sorties with 261 aerial victories to its credit, the group is also known for the adversity it faced.

“Lt. Col. Gray and his fellow Tuskegee Airmen are shining examples of personal and professional courage,” said Col. Tyler Otten, 477th Fighter Group commander. “Not only did they exhibit that courage in aerial combat, they displayed it at home in America as they stood for the concept that our nation is stronger and better when we are united. We are thrilled to have him here to share some of his experiences with us and deepen our connection with our unit’s Tuskegee heritage.”

Before leaving the 477th Fighter Group to get a tour of the F-22 Grey shared some wisdom and also encouraged service members to continue to better themselves as individuals.

“You are part of our heritage Air Force. People don’t know that and it’s not widely publicized. The roots are there but it’s up to the people to spread the word about our Air Force’s history and how you are continuing our legacy,” said Grey

In addition to the 477th Fighter Group tour Gray lunched with JBER Airmen, spoke at the 3rd Wing All Call and attended the 673rd Air Base Wing promotion and award ceremony.

Guard, Reserve Airmen graduate JBER's first SNCO leadership development course

By Tech. Sgt. Dana Rosso
477th Fighter Group Public Affairs

JOINT BASE ELMENDORF RICHARDSON, Alaska-- The 477th Fighter Group graduated its first Senior Noncommissioned Officer Leadership Development class here Jan. 26.

Ten SNCO's from the Alaska Air Guard's 176th Wing and eight from the Air Force Reserve 477th Fighter Group attended this two day course. The class provided the senior noncommissioned officers the opportunity to explore in depth communication, trust, teamwork, and current Air Force Reserve leadership issues and initiatives.

"This course serves as a refresher for the NCO Academy as well as the SNCO Academy," said Tech. Sgt. Heidi Venable, 477th FG Education and Training NCOIC. "Because Reservists have the ability to do PME by correspondence it is nice for supervisors to have an opportunity for in person hands on training as well as a chance to interact with their peers experiencing similar leadership challenges."

This course uses lecture as well as discussion and experiential learning techniques to convey topic techniques followed with an analysis and feedback discussion. Attendees conducted a personalized assessment of their own leadership abilities and skills.

The 477th Fighter Group will be hosting a NCO Leadership Development Course in April, any Staff or Tech. Sgt. interested in attending the class can register by contacting the 477th Fighter Group Education and Training Office at 907-551-4750.
